*American Radical: The Trials of Norman Finkelstein by David Cole

David Cole's American Radical: The Trials of Norman Finkelstein tells the story of Norman Finkelstein, a controversial academic who has been accused of anti-Semitism and Holocaust denial. Finkelstein is a vocal critic of Israel and has been banned from speaking at several universities. Cole argues that Finkelstein is a victim of McCarthyism and that his case is a warning about the dangers of suppressing dissent.

*The Line: The New Radicalism Redefining Asian America by Michael Luo

Michael Luo's The Line: The New Radicalism Redefining Asian America examines the rise of Asian American activism in the wake of the Black Lives Matter movement. Luo argues that Asian Americans are increasingly rejecting the model minority myth and embracing a more confrontational approach to fighting for their rights.

*Agents of Terror: Inside the FBI's Counterterrorism Division by Matthew Cole

Matthew Cole's Agents of Terror: Inside the FBI's Counterterrorism Division offers a behind-the-scenes look at the FBI's efforts to combat terrorism. Cole interviews agents who have worked on some of the most high-profile terrorism cases in recent years, including the 9/11 attacks and the Boston Marathon bombing.

*ISIS: The State of Terror by Jessica Stern and J.M. Berger

Jessica Stern and J.M. Berger's ISIS: The State of Terror provides a comprehensive overview of the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS). Stern and Berger argue that ISIS is a unique terrorist threat that poses a serious challenge to global security. They examine the group's ideology, its recruitment strategies, and its military capabilities.
