This comprehensive book covers everything you need to know about producing theatre, from the basics of fundraising and marketing to the more complex aspects of managing a production team and working with creatives.

With contributions from leading theatre producers, including Sonia Friedman, Cameron Mackintosh and Nica Burns, 'So You Want To Be a Theatre Producer' is packed with practical advice and insights.

What does a theatre producer do?

A theatre producer is responsible for the overall management of a theatre production. This includes raising the finance, assembling the creative team, marketing the show and managing the production budget.

Producers play a vital role in the theatre industry, and they are responsible for bringing new and exciting work to the stage.

What skills do you need to be a theatre producer?

To be a successful theatre producer, you need a combination of business acumen and creative flair.

Essential skills include:

- Strong financial management skills
- Excellent marketing and PR skills
- The ability to manage a team of creatives
- A passion for theatre

How do you get started as a theatre producer?

There is no one-size-fits-all approach to becoming a theatre producer. However, there are a few things you can do to get started.

- Get involved in theatre at a local level.
- Volunteer at a theatre company or festival.
- Take a course in theatre production.
- Network with other theatre professionals.

Once you have some experience under your belt, you can start to develop your own projects.

What are the challenges of being a theatre producer?

Being a theatre producer is a challenging but rewarding job. Some of the challenges you may face include:

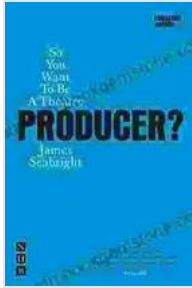

- Raising finance
- Marketing your show
- Managing a team of creatives
- Dealing with the pressure of opening night

However, if you are passionate about theatre and have the drive to succeed, then the rewards of being a theatre producer can be immense.

Producing theatre is a complex and challenging business, but it can also be incredibly rewarding. If you are thinking of becoming a theatre producer, then Nick Hern Books' 'So You Want To Be a Theatre Producer' is the essential guide to getting started.
