In 1912, Captain Guðjónsson was given command of the SS Hekla, a small wooden steamship that would become his most famous vessel. The Hekla was a workhorse of the Icelandic fishing industry, carrying crews and catch to and from the treacherous fishing grounds off the coast of Greenland.

On June 9, 1912, the Hekla set sail from Reykjavík on a routine fishing expedition. The weather was fair, and the crew was in good spirits.

However, disaster struck just a few days later when the Hekla encountered a massive storm in the Greenland Sea. The ship was tossed about like a toy in the relentless waves, and the crew was forced to abandon ship.

Captain Guðjónsson and his crew spent the next 13 days adrift in lifeboats. They endured freezing temperatures, hunger, and thirst. But they never gave up hope. Led by their indomitable captain, they rowed and sailed their lifeboats hundreds of miles across the unforgiving Arctic Ocean.

On June 22, 1912, a miracle occurred. The lifeboats were spotted by a passing Norwegian steamer. The crew of the Norwegian ship rescued Captain Guðjónsson and his men, and they were finally brought to safety.

The story of Captain Guðjónsson's ordeal became a national sensation in Iceland. He was hailed as a hero, and his crew was awarded the Icelandic Medal for Gallantry. Captain Guðjónsson continued to sail for many years after his harrowing experience, and he became a legend in the Icelandic maritime community.

Captain Sigurður Guðjónsson's story is a testament to the indomitable spirit of human adventure. It is a story of courage, determination, and triumph over adversity. It is a story that will continue to inspire generations to come.

Legacy

Captain Sigurður Guðjónsson's legacy lives on today in Iceland. He is remembered as one of the greatest sea captains in Icelandic history, and his story is still told in schools and homes across the country.

In 1992, a statue of Captain Guðjónsson was erected in his hometown of Stykkishólmur. The statue stands as a tribute to his courage, determination, and unwavering spirit.

Captain Guðjónsson's story is also told in the book "13 Days Adrift," which was written by his son, Sigurður Guðjónsson Jr. The book has been translated into several languages, and it has become a classic of Icelandic literature.

Captain Sigurður Guðjónsson was a true pioneer of the Icelandic maritime industry. His story is a reminder of the courage, determination, and spirit of adventure that has always been a part of the Icelandic people.
